

Guidelines for the Chickasaw Nation Dynamic Woman of the Year Nominations

The Chickasaw Nation Dynamic Woman of the Year Award was established in October 2006 to honor Chickasaw women who have made significant contributions to the Chickasaw Nation and its citizens. These women serve as role models to other Chickasaw women, make a difference in the lives of Chickasaws and other citizens and enrich their communities and society at large.

As leaders in education, health care, arts, cultural advocacy, legal professions, policies, social services and community development, Chickasaw women have forged new roads that continue to serve as a force of empowerment for girls, women and men of all ages.

Chickasaw women chosen for this honor have inspired, given hope and opened new possibilities and opportunities for others. They have made contributions to improving and enhancing the lives of those around them, accomplished professional goals, enriched their communities and preserved the cultural heritage of the Chickasaw Nation and its people.

Criteria:

Female Chickasaw citizens who are living and 35 years and older are eligible for nomination.

Nominees should exhibit the qualities of the Dynamic Woman through their actions and accomplishments such as the ones listed below.

- Pioneers in their fields or in a project that benefits the Chickasaw Nation and its citizens.
- Women who have distinguished themselves in a professional field including, but not limited to, education, health care, law, history, cultural advocacy and preservation, language preservation and revitalization, government, civic leadership, aviation and space, business, technology, journalism, banking and finance, children's issues, social services, arts and entertainment.
- Women who have perpetuated the Chickasaw spirit by sustaining Chickasaw traditions and culture in the family and the community.
- Women who have championed other women, women's issues or served as an advocate for issues important to women.
- Women who, through their lifestyles, exemplify the character, strength and values of the Chickasaw Nation and its people - honor, integrity, perseverance, visionary leadership and commitment to family and community.

Employees of the Chickasaw Nation or its subsidiaries and women currently serving as Chickasaw officials and/or in appointed positions of the tribal executive branch are not eligible.
